

Let's rethink water

Using recycled water at your home helps you save on your water bill while helping save the planet.

Drinking water is precious – and its supply isn't infinite. By using recycled water for things like gardening, flushing toilets and washing clothes – you're saving up to 70% of the drinking water you'd normally use up on these household activities.

What is recycled water?

Recycled water is wastewater that's been rigorously treated locally to get rid of any nasties. It's gone through a process of microfiltration and ultraviolet disinfection, on top of the usual wastewater treatment process. This means the water is completely safe to use for non-potable purposes.

Why is recycled water the smarter choice?

Using recycled water is the smarter way to live – it creates ripples of positive impact for your family, the local community and the planet.

Altogether's recycled water is used for*:

- flushing toilets
- washing clothes
- watering the garden
- washing cars, boats and caravans
- cleaning windows, paths, driveways and outdoor furniture
- ornamental water features

Better for the earth – and the bank account

Not only is recycled water good for the environment, it's also more cost-effective for you.

Recycled water is charged at a lower rate than drinking water, so using it for washing clothes, cleaning and gardening reduces the amount you spend on water overall.

With Altogether, you're on the bright side of history

Keeps your drinking water separate

Recycled water runs through purple pipes that are completely separate from your drinking water pipes – so you can still enjoy drinking water in your home's indoor taps and showers.

It also meets strict recycled water quality guidelines – so it's completely safe.
